Chapter I

Introduction

Stuck on your current project? Don't even know where to start? Rather than submitting an empty repository for review, try submitting ft_helpme!

This project is designed to pair you up with a reviewer, and help you ask the questions that you need to progress in your projects.

Chapter II

Instructions

- The review for this project should last roughly 30 minutes. No more, no less.

- You may use the turn-in repository to submit the code you would like reviewed from any project.

- After you've submitted your code, or nothing at all, set the project as finished and set up a review.

- If you have questions, prepare them ahead of time! You'll want to use the time during your review as efficiently as possible.

- Try to avoid questions like: "I don't know how to start." or "What am I supposed to do?"

- Go in with questions you've thought about, and try to work towards a solution together with your reviewer. The more prepartions you make, the more value you will get out of your review!

- It isn't up to your reviewer to solve the problem for you! They are only there to nudge you in the right direction.

- If you learned anything during your review, make sure to write in the feedback for the evaluation!
